Speaker 1 My grandmother came over from Naples in the fifties, and she never spoke much English, even at home. When she died a few years ago, I realised that a whole side of the family was slipping away from us, and I wanted my children to have some connection with it [21]. People assume it was all those holidays in Italy that got me going, but I'd been going there for years without learning a word. The apps were fine for vocabulary, actually. What I hadn't bargained for was how shattered I'd feel after an hour of simply trying to keep up with people talking. [26]

Speaker 2 I'd love to tell you it was a passion for French culture, but my company opened an office in Lyon, and frankly it was French or no promotion [22]. I didn't have to move – I go over a couple of times a month. I'd assumed people would switch to English the moment I stumbled, but in meetings they just don't, which is good for me. And they correct my grammar constantly. What really surprised me, though, is that I'm a different person in French [27]: far more formal, almost pompous. My colleagues say I even stand differently.

Speaker 3 When I retired, I was determined not to spend my days in front of the television. I'd read that learning a language is one of the best things you can do for an ageing brain [23], so I chose Japanese – the hardest thing I could think of. I'd love to read Murakami in the original one day, but that's a long way off. The classes are great fun, which I'd rather expected. What did take me aback was how quickly it all drains away [28]: I spent three weeks at my sister's without practising and came back having forgotten half the characters I knew.

Speaker 4 My wife's family are Greek, but they all speak perfect English, so for years I never bothered. Then at a dinner party a friend bet me fifty pounds that I couldn't order a meal in Greek by the summer [24]. Well, I'm stubborn, so that was that. I won the bet, as it happens. It's done wonders for my confidence, I suppose, though I'd expected that. What I hadn't expected was that in Crete, the moment I opened my mouth, the waiters would answer in English. [29] A bit deflating, after all that effort.

Speaker 5 We're moving to Barcelona next spring for my husband's job, so I signed up for Spanish classes straight away [25] – two evenings a week, and half an hour every morning before work. It isn't for my own job, by the way; I'll carry on working remotely for a firm in London. Following conversations is hard work, of course, but I knew it would be. The unexpected bonus has been how much bolder I've become generally. [30] If I can get through a phone call to a Spanish landlord, a presentation at work doesn't frighten me in the slightest.

Explicaciones

Speaker 1 · 21 B · 26 D

Task One · B to keep a link with their family background
Correcta. Tras la muerte de su abuela napolitana: a whole side of the family was slipping away from us, and I wanted my children to have some connection with it.

No es G because of a memorable holiday (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Lo descarta: People assume it was all those holidays in Italy that got me going, pero había ido durante años without learning a word.

Task Two · D how tiring it is to follow conversations
Correcta. La señal What I hadn't bargained for (§2.3) introduce lo inesperado: acabar agotada (shattered) después de una hora intentando seguir una conversación.

No es E how unhelpful language-learning apps are (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Las aplicaciones le parecieron bien: The apps were fine for vocabulary, actually.

Teoría: §8.1 Part 4: la tarea · §4.2 Mencionado y descartado · §2.3 Señales del discurso oral

Speaker 2 · 22 A · 27 H

Task One · A to meet a requirement at work
Correcta. Lo que de verdad le movió fue el trabajo: la empresa abrió una oficina en Lyon y it was French or no promotion. La pasión por la cultura francesa la descarta él mismo con I'd love to tell you.

No es D to prepare for a move abroad (mencionado y descartado §4.2). No se ha mudado: I didn't have to move.

Task Two · H how differently they behave when using the language
Correcta. Lo dice con todas las letras: What really surprised me, though, is that I'm a different person in French, más formal y hasta pomposo.

No es A how little native speakers care about grammar (eco léxico §4.1). Recoge grammar, pero dice lo contrario: they correct my grammar constantly.

No es B how readily native speakers switch to English (expectativa §4.7). Es lo que esperaba y no ocurrió: I'd assumed people would switch to English the moment I stumbled, but in meetings they just don't.

Speaker 3 · 23 E · 28 F

Correcta. Al jubilarse no quería pasar el día delante del televisor, y había leído que learning a language is one of the best things you can do for an ageing brain.

No es C to read a favourite author in the original (no responde §4.3). Leer a Murakami es un deseo para el futuro (that's a long way off), no el motivo por el que empezó.

Task Two · F how quickly they forget what they have learnt
Correcta. take me aback es «sorprender»: What did take me aback was how quickly it all drains away. Tres semanas sin practicar y había olvidado la mitad de los caracteres.

No es C how much they enjoy their lessons (expectativa §4.7). Disfruta de las clases, pero contaba con ello: which I'd rather expected.

Teoría: §8.1 Part 4: la tarea · §4.3 Cierto, pero no responde · §2.3 Señales del discurso oral · §4.7 Expectativa frente a realidad · §8.3 Trampas propias

Speaker 4 · 24 F · 29 B

Task One · F to take up a challenge from a friend
Correcta. El desencadenante es la apuesta: a friend bet me fifty pounds that I couldn't order a meal in Greek by the summer. Y lo remata: so that was that.

No es G because of a memorable holiday (lógica alterada §4.6). El viaje a Creta vino después, cuando ya hablaba griego; no fue lo que le hizo empezar.

No es H to talk to their partner's relatives (no responde §4.3). La familia de su mujer es el antecedente, y justo lo contrario de un motivo: como todos hablan inglés, for years I never bothered (§8.3).

Task Two · B how readily native speakers switch to English
Correcta. What I hadn't expected was that in Crete, the moment I opened my mouth, the waiters would answer in English. Es la sorpresa, y además decepcionante: A bit deflating.

No es G how much more confident they have become in general (expectativa §4.7). La confianza ganada no le sorprende: though I'd expected that.

Teoría: §8.3 Trampas propias · §4.3 Cierto, pero no responde · §4.7 Expectativa frente a realidad

Correcta. Se muda: We're moving to Barcelona next spring for my husband's job, so I signed up for Spanish classes straight away.

No es A to meet a requirement at work (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Lo descarta: It isn't for my own job, by the way. El trabajo que origina la mudanza es el de su marido.

Task Two · G how much more confident they have become in general
Correcta. The unexpected bonus has been how much bolder I've become generally. El ejemplo lo confirma: después de una llamada en español, una presentación no le da miedo.

No es D how tiring it is to follow conversations (expectativa §4.7). Seguir conversaciones le cuesta, pero lo sabía: but I knew it would be.

Teoría: §8.1 Part 4: la tarea · §4.2 Mencionado y descartado · §4.7 Expectativa frente a realidad · §8.3 Trampas propias
