Speaker 1 I'd been baking sourdough at weekends and selling it at the farmers' market, really just for fun. It wasn't that banking was in trouble – I was perfectly comfortable there. Then one Saturday I sold out by nine o'clock and had a queue of people asking whether I did deliveries [21], and I thought: if I don't do this now, I never will. My father told me I was mad to walk away from a bank with a pension. Three years and two shops later, he's gone rather quiet on the subject. [26] Do I lie awake worrying? Not really. Bread's fairly recession-proof.

Speaker 2 Do I regret it? Some days. [27] I sleep better and I see far more of my children, but I miss being good at something – being the person people came to when things went wrong. I go back and forth. [27] I'd been passed over for promotion twice at the hospital, which rankled, I won't pretend otherwise, but I'd have stayed. Then I collapsed on a night shift [22] – exhaustion, nothing worse, as it turned out – and lying in that ward I thought: I am not coming back here. Now I run a small consultancy from home.

Speaker 3 I'd been in print journalism for twenty years, and you could see where it was heading: every year a smaller newsroom [23], fewer pages, more of us doing two jobs. I had no intention of being the last one to turn out the lights. People assume it was the new editor that did it. It wasn't – he was perfectly decent. Two years on, the coffee roastery's still selling to the same six cafés. The bank's been very patient, so I'm not losing sleep over whether we'll survive, but honestly, the pace of it drives me up the wall [28].

Speaker 4 I was expecting my first child at the time, which most people thought made it the worst possible moment to leave a firm of solicitors. But when my aunt left me some money [24] – not a fortune, but enough to cover a year's rent on a small gallery – I knew that if I didn't use it then, I never would. My family thought I'd lost my mind, and to be honest they still don't quite get it. What I hadn't expected was not to miss the firm at all [29] – the colleagues, the sense of importance. Not for a second.

Speaker 5 I'd been doing bits of web design on the side for years, but it never brought in enough to live on. What finally pushed me was bumping into a woman I used to work with [25], who'd gone freelance two years earlier. She said, 'You've been talking about this for a decade. What exactly are you waiting for?' I handed in my notice that week. I earn about half what I used to, and I don't imagine that'll change. That's the deal, and I've made my peace with it. [30] People expect me to pine for the regular salary. I don't, particularly.

Explicaciones

Speaker 1 · 21 E · 26 D

Task One · E the success of a project they ran on the side
Correcta. El negocio de fin de semana triunfa de golpe (one Saturday I sold out by nine o'clock and had a queue of people asking whether I did deliveries) y en ese momento decide: if I don't do this now, I never will.

No es H a sense that their industry was in decline (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Lo descarta: It wasn't that banking was in trouble.

Task Two · D vindicated after others doubted them
Correcta. Su padre lo llamó loco, y ahora: Three years and two shops later, he's gone rather quiet on the subject. El padre calla porque los hechos le han dado la razón al hijo. Es una atenuación (§2.4), y vindicated (§3.4) presupone justo eso: que antes alguien lo cuestionaba.

No es F anxious about whether the business will survive (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Do I lie awake worrying? Not really.

Teoría: §8.1 Part 4: la tarea · §4.2 Mencionado y descartado · §2.4 Matización · §3.4 Léxico de actitud en las opciones

Speaker 2 · 22 B · 27 A

Task One · B a health scare
Correcta. Then I collapsed on a night shift: aunque fuera solo agotamiento, en la cama del hospital decidió I am not coming back here.

No es A being passed over for promotion (no responde §4.3). Es el antecedente, no el desencadenante (§8.3): le molestó, pero I'd have stayed.

Task Two · A ambivalent about what it has cost them
Correcta. La respuesta de la tarea 2 llega antes que la de la 1 (§8.1): Do I regret it? Some days. Gana sueño y tiempo con sus hijos, pierde sentirse competente, y lo resume: I go back and forth. Eso es ambivalent (§3.4).

No es H surprised by how little they miss their old job (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Sí echa de menos algo de su antiguo trabajo: I miss being good at something.

Teoría: §8.3 Trampas propias · §4.3 Cierto, pero no responde · §3.4 Léxico de actitud en las opciones · §8.1 Part 4: la tarea

Speaker 3 · 23 H · 28 B

Task One · H a sense that their industry was in decline
Correcta. you could see where it was heading: every year a smaller newsroom, menos páginas, más trabajo por cabeza. No quería ser the last one to turn out the lights.

No es C a change of management (mencionado y descartado §4.2). People assume it was the new editor that did it. It wasn't.

Task Two · B frustrated by how slowly the business is growing
Correcta. Dos años vendiendo a los mismos seis cafés, y the pace of it drives me up the wall: frustración por el ritmo, no miedo a cerrar.

No es F anxious about whether the business will survive (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Lo descarta: I'm not losing sleep over whether we'll survive.

Teoría: §8.1 Part 4: la tarea · §4.2 Mencionado y descartado · §3.4 Léxico de actitud en las opciones · §8.3 Trampas propias

Speaker 4 · 24 D · 29 H

Task One · D an unexpected sum of money
Correcta. La herencia inesperada: when my aunt left me some money, lo justo para un año de alquiler, y if I didn't use it then, I never would.

No es G becoming a parent (no responde §4.3). El embarazo es el contexto, y jugaba en contra: the worst possible moment.

Task Two · H surprised by how little they miss their old job
Correcta. What I hadn't expected was not to miss the firm at all, y lo subraya: Not for a second.

No es G grateful for the support of their family (mencionado y descartado §4.2). Su familia no la apoyó: My family thought I'd lost my mind.

Teoría: §8.3 Trampas propias · §4.3 Cierto, pero no responde · §2.3 Señales del discurso oral

Speaker 5 · 25 F · 30 E

Task One · F a challenge from a former colleague
Correcta. La señal What finally pushed me da la respuesta: una antigua compañera que le pregunta What exactly are you waiting for?

No es E the success of a project they ran on the side (no responde §4.3). El diseño web era el antecedente, y no tenía éxito: it never brought in enough to live on.

Task Two · E resigned to earning less than before
Correcta. Gana la mitad y no espera que cambie: That's the deal, and I've made my peace with it. Acepta lo inevitable sin entusiasmo: resigned (§3.4).

No es C wistful about the security they gave up (mencionado y descartado §4.2). People expect me to pine for the regular salary. I don't, particularly.

Teoría: §2.3 Señales del discurso oral · §8.3 Trampas propias · §3.4 Léxico de actitud en las opciones · §8.1 Part 4: la tarea
